An Account Objected to.

In the probate court, before Judge Hagner, when Mrs. Amanda Best presented her account as administrative of the estate of Anthony Best, there administratrix of the estate of Anthony Best, there was quite a little scene. In the second account was an item of $620 to J. Parker Jordan, her attorney, of which $120 had already been paid. Jordan sold the balance to George L. Hill. A reference to the auditor was then had to ascertain if there was sufficient assets to meet the indebtedness, and a notice served to the creditors not to pay any money to the administratrix. When the third account was presented Jordan's account was marked settled and Hill ignored. Judge Hagner refused to pass the account, saying that out of $1,300 the lawyers had been paid $550, which he said was excessive, and proved that it cost more to die than to live.

"Mother! Oh, mother! it will break my heart" walled Oinlite, sinking at the lady's feet, and fromping her head into her hands, face downward indy gently raised her child, took her in her and tenderly caresed her, murmuring arms, and tenderly caressed her, murmuring sofily:

"So, my own! hearts never break, or one heart. I know, must have broken long age. Resides, "she, added, in a firmer tone—"Honor must be saved, though hearts be sacrificed."
"Honor, mother, dear? I do not understand. I do not see what honor has to do with it. Or, if I has, I should think that honor would be better saved by my keeping faith with Le than by breaking with him! Ob, mother! mother! I will kill me!" moaned Odalite.
"My ethid, my dear girl, hear me! listen to reson! Leonidas Force has no claim to be remembered by you. You have never been engaged to him. You were but a little girl of thirteen when he went to see an his first voyage, three years ago, and you have not seen him since. What possible claim can he have upon you, slince no betrothel exists between you? genily questioned the lady, tenderly running her lair intgers through the dark tresses of the young lead that leaned upon her bossim.

"Oh, mother," replied the girl, with a heavy

"But, mother darling, Le and I never thought of the family name and estate; we only thought of one another. And, besides, we are such very, very distant constant—only fourth or fifth, I think—that that objection could never be raised. Oh, mother! dear mother! do not compel me to break with Le! I can not! I can not! Oh, indeed, I cannot! she cried, burying her face in the lady's bosom.

Elirida Force caressed her daughter is slience. Presently Qualite lifted her head and pleaded: "He is coming home so soon now, and so full of hope! He expects to be here by Christmas; and he expects—on, yes, I know by his last letter that he expects to—to—" The girl's eyes fell under the compassionate yet scrutinizing gaz, of her mather, and her voice failered into slience.

"To marry you early in the new year, I suppose you mean, dear,"
"He did not say so."

"He did not say so." "He did not say so,"
"No, inother, dear, he did not say so, in so many words, but from the whole tone of his letter he evidently meant so. Father thought he did, and even tried to teaze me about the New Year's wadding—asking me how many hundreds 1 should need to buy my wedding dreds I should need to buy my wedding clothes."

"What was it he said in his letter that leads you to suppose he has any such expeciations? I confess that I saw nothing of such an intention when I read the letter."

"Only this, mother, but it was very significant. He wrote that now he had inherited Greenbushes and all his Aunt Laura's money, he was rich enough to resign from the Navy, and he need not go to see any more, nor ever part with me again, but that he could stay home, repair and refurnish the house, improve the land, and farm it on all the new principles, and make the place is parallise for us to live in. He wrote, mother, dear, as of certain fixed lacts."

"He was very presumptuous, my dear little girl, for there is nothing certain in this world of changes," gravely commented the lady.

"But Les heat has not changed, nor has mine."

I would rather die this day and never behold the face of Le again, than listen to Colonel Anglesca!"
"Odalite! Odalite, my child! You are talking to your mother. Come to my heart again, and caim your excitement," said the hady, holding out her arms.

And the young girl fell weeping upon the bosom of her mother.

The lady allowed some time to pass in which The lady allowed some time to pass in which the girl's paroxysm of tears exhaused itself, and then caressing her gently, she began in a soothing tone:

"My precious child, do you doubt your mother's love or truth?"

"Oh, no, no, no! How could you ask such a question of your own child, mother?" carnestly protested Odalite.

"Do you doubt that duty is to be held above all other considerations?"

"No! Oh, no!"

protested Odmitte.

"Do you doubt that duty is to be held above all other considerations?"

"No! Oh, no!"

"No! Oh, no!"

"Well then, I have something to tell you, my darling, which will make you forget all selfish aims, and even also the wishes of your old playmate. Come with me to your own bed chamber, where we shall be most secure from all interruption. I will tell you of a fatal episode in my own youth, when I was younger even than you are now. Oh, that I should have to tell such a tale to my daugnter! But, Odallie, when you have heard it you will learn just what you have to do in order to save us all, and especially to save your noble, generous, honorable father from ruin and disgrace. And then, Odalite, when you have learned all, you shall do exactly as you please. Not one word of coercion, not another word of persuasion will I utter. I will leave our fate in your hands, and you shall be absolutely free to act. Come with me now."

She took her daughter's arm, and they arose from the sofa.

For a moment they stood, quite accidentally, facing a rail mirror between two windows on the opposite side of the room, and that mirror for the naoment reflected two beautiful forms, of which it would be difficult to decide which should bear off the stood of the
